When the public is asked to name careers in health, most people will say doctor, nurse, midwife and paramedic. In fact, there are more than 350 different careers ranging from art therapist to window cleaner, visit the Health Careers website [3].

Health Careers' role is to make people aware of the range of opportunities available and offer them up-to-date and reliable careers information. We develop campaign and communications projects to help us achieve this and develop solutions to specific recruitment problems in the NHS.

We have a core business model which includes a website, literature, marketing materials and social media. The team is made up of primarily communications and marketing expertise but we also have project managers and a careers adviser. As part of our work programme, we explore bespoke project and campaigns that meet the needs of our audiences and/or stakeholders.

We ensure that potential recruits have the information they need to make decisions about their future careers.

Our work supports the final three corporate objectives: Changing and improving, Delivering and implementing and Focusing on tomorrow.
