Trainees and trainers should be clear as to what good supervision looks like, whilst the vision for effective supervision is clear, there are numerous interventions which can support its delivery.

Effective supervision is essential to the development of all doctors and contributes to patient experience and safety. The Enhancing Supervision in Postgraduate Training report [6] sets out what high-quality supervision looks like for doctors in training and provides a practical toolkit to assist trainees and supervisors.

Working with the CQC and NHS England and NHS Improvement, the suite of resources including handbook [7], standards document [8] and animation film provide trainees, trainers and supervisors with easy to understand information to ensure supervision is delivered and received in the best possible way.

From the development of this work, HEE has a cross-organisational commitment with CQC and NHS England and Improvement to work with providers to ensure that high-quality supervision is provided.

Reforming Medical Education for the good of all [9]

It seems obvious to say, but doctors who receive high quality training, have the right support and feel valued and motivated, will deliver the best patient care.
