A series of weekly information films aimed at updating medical and dental trainees on the latest information and guidance for their training during the pandemic has been launched by Health Education England.

The first film of the series is fronted by Professor Simon Gregory, Deputy Medical Director, Health

Education England.

Professor Gregory said:

"It is extremely important that we keep in regular contact with trainees during these challenging times.

"We recognise the incredible efforts they are making at this time and the impact the pandemic is having on training, so it is vital that we provide regular information, highlight the support available and key events such as the upcoming ARCP webinar"
